

The Derek Bok Center for Teaching and Learning
Fall Teaching Conference
August 23-24th, 2017

Schedule for Wednesday, August 23th:
Teaching Fundamentals for New Teaching Fellows

The first day of the Fall Teaching Conference focuses on the fundamentals of teaching undergraduate sections at Harvard. There are two tracks: the Humanities/Qualitative Social Sciences track, which focuses on leading discussion sections in related disciplines, and the STEM/Quantitative Social Sciences track, which focuses on the kinds of sections typically found in STEM courses. At the end of the day, there will be an undergraduate panel discussing various teaching strategies they have found helpful in their classes at Harvard, followed by Q and A from the audience.

Humanities/Qualitative Social Sciences STEM/Quantitative Social Sciences All

8:30–9:00 REGISTRATION & BREAKFAST, SEVER HALL QUADRANGLE TENT & LOBBY
9:00-9:30	Welcome and Plenary: Robert Lue, Professor of the Practice of Molecular and Cellular Biology; Richard L. Menschel Faculty Director of the Derek Bok Center for Teaching and Learning
9:30-10:45	Humanities and Qualitative Social Sciences, Part I	STEM and Quantitative Social Sciences, Part I
10:45-11:00	Break
11:00-12:15	Humanities and Qualitative Social Sciences, Part II	STEM and Quantitative Social Sciences, Part II
12:15-1:00	Lunch, Sever Hall Quadrangle Tent
1:00-2:15	Humanities and Qualitative Social Sciences, Part III	STEM and Quantitative Social Sciences, Part III
2:15-2:30	Break, Sever Hall Lobby
2:30-3:30	What Helps Students Learn: An Undergraduate Perspective	